DRCC WORKSHOP
November 7, 2018

Morning Workshop

Autism is a mind-body disorder. Research examining this connection has been extensive in looking at causes and interventions for those with autism and other neurobehavioral disorders. What we have learned is that all of us can benefit from this understanding and healthful life strategies.

Afternoon Workshop

We all get into habits and comfortable patterns of behavior. Sometimes revisiting the basics of behavior management and positive behavioral supports helps us to come up with new ways to help clients, students, and others with inappropriate or maladaptive behavior. We will use examples from the audience of current problem behaviors to apply what we discuss.

About the Presenter
